Gateway leading to St. Bartholomew's Church, Smithfield. The ancient Gateway with its dog-toothed stone arch was once the western entrance to the Priory Church of St. Bartholomew, of which now only the Choir, Lady Chapel and Transepts remain. It is one of the most interesting churches in England and was founded by Rahere, a witty courtier of Henry I, who went in 1120 a pilgrim to Rome, fell ill and vowed if he recovered to build a hospital and a monastery, which he did and became himself the first Prior.
